Professional Updates

Pattern Driven Acquisition (PDA)

Tasawar Hussain (Deputy Librarian)

Historically, libraries have been eager to make purchases based on requests by their patrons and have used various programs to acquire the desired material. Technology now allows libraries to let patrons identify books of interest and have their access needs immediately gratified. Pattern Driven Acquisition (PDA) module has made it possible as it is getting popular with the passage of time as most of the publishers are offering this type of facility to the libraries for selection and purchasing of e-books.

Patron driven acquisitions is a collection development tool that shifts a library's purchasing decision from a librarian to a patron. It is a way for students, faculty, and staff to decide what the library buys. It is a plan where bibliographic records are added to the library's catalog and made available to patrons and as patrons discover and access them, a purchase is triggered. It means the purchase is being done on the basis of access and use by the library patrons.

PDA is built on a simple idea, in a largely digital information environment, it's increasingly possible to let library users find and identify desired documents prior to the library's purchase of them, and for the library to pay only for what its patrons find and actually use. PDA is also known as Demand-Driven Acquisition (DDA).

This acquisition module offers libraries to create collections of titles of their choice, provide full access to end-users, and have titles automatically added to their permanent collection in real-time based on usage. PDA is an affordable way to provide access to vast amounts of information, while only purchasing titles that get used. It is being perceived by the library professionals as an alternative of Inter Library Loan (ILL).

At a time when library budgets are shrinking, library funding's are under stress and when technological changes continues to expand the universe of contents available to patrons, library effectiveness depends on being responsive to user needs. Pattern Driven Acquisition (PDA) is perhaps the single best way to leverage the funds that libraries have, as it gives libraries a new tool to compete an era of widespread instant e-books access.

Benefits of Pattern Driven Acquisition (PDA)

- Provides critical mass of widest, most recently-published selection of titles available to patrons
- Library budget goes toward funding what actually gets used
- Short-term Loan (pay-per-view) pricing model provides access at a fraction of purchase price
- Titles purchased based on demand show higher use than those pre-selected
- Eliminates time and guesswork required by selectors to search for titles and purchase
- Seamless access/workflow for patrons and library staff
- Provides cost-effective, immediate alternative to ILL

Research at CIIT Islamabad Campus

A research paper on the topic of “CIIT Islamabad Campus Library Collection: comprehensive study – present and future scenario” has been published in “Pakistan Library and Information Science Journal” June 2013 issue. The Journal is listed in HEC Recognized Journals and it is being quarterly published by the Library Promotion Bureau, Karachi. The paper is a joint effort of Mr. Tariq Mahmood, Deputy Librarian and Raja Mohammad Ibrahim, Chief Librarian.

The paper analyses the print material of CIIT Islamabad Campus Library. The basic purpose of this study is to compare the CIIT library collection against International collection and to know which department or discipline is enjoying sufficient availability of resources and which department or discipline is suffering from their low or lesser availability. There are about nine department under five faculties in CIIT Islamabad campus. The total collection has been analyzed against total number of users according to departments and faculties respectively. The study shows that six departments are enjoying sufficient collection where as four departments have less collections.

On the basis of this study, it would be easy for the library management to decide which department requires more resources. Furthermore, this will also help in developing library collection policy effectively and positively.
